Swift lifted his plate, Underneath were the bill of fare of a neighboring cafe and a half crown. He turned to the waiter at his side and gave him the money. "Here," he said, "bring me the worth of that in goose and potatoes," The guests each sent the money under his plate for whatever dish he chose, and the dinner was eaten and enjoyed. Swift then laid upon the table £100 and, deducting the three crowns which had been spent, said: "The remainderthe crumbs and fragments-is to go to the poor. We all have had enough money to satisfy hunger. You shall advise me how the rest is to be spent."

The Rope of Ocnus.

"The Rope of Ocnus" is the name of a famous picture painted by Polygnotus, a Greek artist, who died about 426 B. C. He was the first who gave life, character and expression to pictures. According to Pliny, he opened the mouth and showed the teeth of his figures and was the first to paint women with transparent draperies and rich headdresses. The picture represents Ocnus as a poor man, weaving a rope of straw, while behind him stands an ass consuming the other end of the rope. The silent lesson thus conveyed is said to have had a wholesome effect upon the wife of Ocnus, whose extravagance had been his ruin, so that she became frugal and thrifty and helped him to rise from penury to great prosperity. The phrase "like the rope of Ocnus" signifies profitless la-

Sweet Potato Coffee.

If coffee is suspected of being harm ful to the nerves it is the part of wis dom not to drink it. Most substitute are unspeakable concoctions. During the war sweet potato coffee was brought to a rare perfection and is said to be a very palatable beverage. Good Housekeeping furnishes an old war recipe: Pare the potatoes, cut them in small dice and let dry for a day or two. Parch like coffee, grind and put away in a cool, dark place. Mixed with one-third real coffee, the potato coffee was much liked, and even when used alone it was said to be very good. The weak nerved might try this substitute with the certainty that they are getting a drink that is at least unobjectionable.

A man seated closes his knees to catch an object thrown on his lap. A woman in similar circumstances opens hers. This is a fact that Mark Twain used in "Huckleberry Finn." Huck is disguised as a girl, and a woman throws an object into his lap. Though he wears a skirt, he hasn't sense enough to spread his knees apart so as to catch the object better-he claps them together, as a trousered man would do. An English novelist in a book called "The White Rose" uses the same idea. Pierre de Coldirodi, the Italian romancer, uses it in his well known "Maidens and Love." The Frenchman ashamed of your saying such a thing." The visitor who was dining with the family laughed heartily. "Bobby appreclates the good things of life," he said, "like all the rest of us."

"Don't you think it was a good dinner?" Bobby asked the visitor. "Yes, indeed," the latter replied, with a smile. "I enjoyed it thoroughly." "Mother said she thought you would. because she didn't suppose you got very much at home."

Starfishes commit suicide. When one is caught in a net it dissolves its corporation into a dozen or so of frag ments, and the pieces escape through the meshes. In time each becomes a perfect animal. To preserve the star fish whole it must be plunged into a bucket of fresh water before it has time to take the alarm. Fresh water SCHOOL BOOKS is instant death to it, and thus only can some varieties of the starfish be
